The pedestrians arrived on the Adriatic on on Sunday. Mr. Corney was a passenger on the Umbria yesterday.

They will participate in the six-day international walking match at Madison Square Garden, which will open at midnight on Feb. 5. The visitors are stopping at the Hoffman House. They will train on the Pastime Athletic Grounds the boulevards and highways. William O'Brien, of the Sporting Times, accompanied the visitors. He says that there are nearly one hundred entries for the international contest already, including George Mason, who won the 72-hour championship from George Littlewood; Charles Rowell, George Connors, Joe Scott, the Australian, and Wm. Griffin.

Mr. Cuminsky wants to match Cartwright against the world for fifty miles in a six-day go-as-you-please match for $1,000 and the

ABOUT BROOKLYN MANAGERS.

Col. William E. Sinn, of the Park Theatre, is ranked among the wealthy managers of America. He comes from Baltimore. During the war he controlled a theatre in that city and in Washington. As soon as he assumed the management of the Park Theatre he eradicated the variety element in one season and made the house a resort for the best audiences in Brooklyn. The very best attractions appear at the Park Theatre. Col. Minn married Miss Cora Tanner, the star. Early next September she will appear at the Fourteenth Street Theatre in a play called "Fascination. Col. Sinn has confided the business interests of his a "royal good fellow," and always has some a "royal good fellow," and always has some amusing story to tell.

Measurs. Hyde & Benman are extremely well provided with the goods of this world. They not only run the variety theatre in Brooklyn known as Hyde & Behman's, but the Grand Opera-House in that city, which they lease to Messra. Knowles & morris, and the Park Theatre in this city, of which Ned Harrigan has taken possession. Mesara Hyde & Bohman have amussed considerable wealth. They give legitimate, first-class variety entertainments at their theatre, which is always crowded no matter what the attraction may be.
Col. Theodore Morris, of the Grand Opera-

House, is said to be the only manager in this country who has been graduated from West Point, and ho at one time held the command of a battery in the regular United States Army. The following atory is told of Col. Morris: He was present at one of President Lincoln's receptions in Washington, and was dancing with a Well-known lady when s three-cornered note was handed to him. He opened it and found it was a command from the Captain of his battery ordering him to report within an hour for active service in the field. He hastily excused himself to his partner, saking her to take care of his gold epaulets for him, and within an hour he left Washington with his battery, wearing his evening dress. He did not return to Washington until the war was over. Col. Morris married Miss Kate Denin, the actress. Col. Knowles, the partner of Col. Morris in the Grand Opera enterprise, is known in Brooklyn as the actor-manager. For two years he has been connected with the Madison Square Theatre. was the original George Drew in " Esmeralda." He is much sought after for advice by the amatuer theatrical people of Brooklyn. The Grand Opera-House is a theatre much praised by combinations from the fact that Col. Knowles gives his personal attention to the details. Very few men understand FRENCH, BUT VERY PROPER. stage management as well as he does.

P. F. Proctor, of the Criterion Theatre, is the leading "popular price" manager of Brooklyn. Besides controlling the Criterion, he directs the fortunes of the Novelty Theatre in Williamsburg, and is now completing his great chain of popularprice theatres throughout the country. He is now directly connected with eleven theatres and is soon to be a partner in a new house in this city, to be built on the site of the old Twenty-Third Street Tabernacle. Mr. Proctor almost lives on the train, as he is constantly making trips to one or other of his theatres. He thoroughly understands management and originally started the popularprice scheme in this city in connection with H. R.

Jacobs. Mr. Proctor is young and handsome. H. C. Miner, who is so well known in this city, is the lessee of the Brooklyn Theatre. He leaves its management, however, in the hands of his son, H. C. Miner, ir., who, although young, gives evidence that he has inherited his father's great man agerial tact. Young Miner thinks a great deal of dress, and has been irreverently called a dude.

it is very good—like Lee Avenue Academy of Music in Williamsburg. Mr. Berger is known as the home manager, and a little curl; and gives his constant attention to the theatre. He has been connected with theatrical management for the past twenty-five years, and ten years ago managed a company of his own on the road. His partner is called Lawyer Price, and is located in this city. He has a big legal practice. Mr. Price wrote the successful fire play called . One of the Bravest," and a sketch entitled "Moloney's Rame." He has just finished a melodrama which touches upon phases of the life of New York crim-what purported to be an interview with Postmaster Pierson and Supt. Richards, in which those gentlemen expressed themselves as follows: "The clerks in the New York Post-Office are contented. They are well paid and not overworked. They work about nine hours each day and their salary ranges from $480 to $1,500 per annum." Nine hundred of the clerks come nearer to $480 than the remaining 100 come to $1,500. The clerks of the Registry Division of the New York Post-Office who went to work at $0 clock yesterday morning got through their day's work at 11.30 last night, just five and a half hours after Messrs. Pierson's and Richards's scheduled time of nine hours per day: and to prove to you that this is not exceptional, I refer you to the time-hook kept in the Registry Division, which will prove that in the last month those very men have worked ten days over-time in a possible thirty, without a penny of remuneration, and that, too, in a very foul atmosphere. hours each day and their salary ranges from atmosphere. A System of Inconvenience o the Editor of The Evening World:

Knowing that you are always ready to hear the grievances of your readers I beg leave to make known through the columns of your valuable paper the dissatisfaction caused by E. H. Coffin, ir., Superintendent of the Fort Lee ferry. The boat, it seems, is run for the inconvenience of passengers, and the prayers of the passengers are unheeded by the Super-intendent. Is it not an outrage? An inconvenienced passenger, WILLIAM J. BERRY.

Those Interesting Stories

To the Editor of The Evening World:

I am intensely interested in the police captains' series. They are the best special feature that has appeared for years in the New York papers. New York, Jan, 17.

A Field for American Plays.

Mr. Waldtern Pegg, an English theatrical mana-ger of wide experience, and proprietor of the Theatres Royal at Eastbourne and Inverness, is in the city looking for American plays. Mr. Pegg ha great faith in American clays and will remain in this city some time pending the efforts of smottlous New Yorkers.

The Plain Truth

s that Hood's Sarsaparilla has cured thousands of pec ple who suffered severely with rheumatism. It neutral-izes the lactic acid in the blood, which causes those ter-rible pains and aches, and also vitalizes and enriches the blood, thus preventing the recurrence of the disease. These facts warrant us in urging you, if you suffer with rheumatism, to give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial.

"God bless you, my boy! says he, smoothin' the child's hair with his great, hard hand. 'You're a true Englishman, every inch of you; you wouldn't tell a lie to save your life! Well, if so be as yer father's cast ye off, I'll be yer father from this day forth; and if I ever forget you, then may God forget me!

"And he kep' his word, too. When we got to Halifax he found out the little un's sunt and give her a lump o' money to make him comfortable, and now he goes to see the youngster every voyage as regiar as can be; and to see the pair on 'em together—the Jime chap so fond o' him, and not bearin' him a bit o' grudge—it's 'bout as pretty a sight as ever I seed. And now, sir, axin' yer parding, it's time for me to be goin' below; so I'll just wish yer good-night."

no doubt, them Dalmatians, and reason good, too, seein' they man half the Austrian navy but they ain't got the seasonin' of an Englishman, put it how yer will!"

I am standing on the upper deck of the Austrian Lloyd steamer, and beside me, with his elbow on the hand-rail and his short pipe between his teeth, lounges the chief engineer, delighted to get hold of a listener who (as he phrases it) " has been about

'No, they ain't got an Englishman's sea sonin'," he continues, "and, what's more, they ain't got an Englishman's pluck neither, not when it comes to a real scrape."
"Can no one but an Englishmen have any pluck, then?" asked I, laughing. pluck, then?" asked I, laughing.
"Well, I won't just go for to say that; o' course a man as is a man 'ull have pluck in him all the world over. I've seed a Frencher tackle a shark to save his messmate; and I've seed a Rooshan stand to his gun arter every man, in the battery, barrin' himself, had been blowed all to smash. But, if yer come to that, the pluckiest feller as ever I seed warn't a man at all!"

"What was he, then—a wcman?"
"No, nor that neither: though, mark ye, I " Ay, ay, sir ; they're smart seamen enough,

No, nor that neither: though, mark ye, I don't go for to say as how women ain't got pluck enough, too, some on 'em at least. But this un as I'm a talkin' on was a little lad, not much much bigger 'n Tom Thumb, only with a sperrit of his own as 'ud ha' blowed up a man-o'-war a'most. Would you like to hear about it?"

Leagerly assent, and the parrater knock. about it?"
I eagerly assent; and the narrator, knocking the ashes out of his pipe, folds his brawny arms upon the top of the rail, and commences as follows:
"Bout three years ago, afore I got this

"Bout three years ago, afore I got this berth as I'm in now. I was second engineer aboard a Liverpool steamer bound for New York. There'd been a lot of extra cargo sent down just at the last minute, and we'd had no end of a job stowin' it away, and that ran us late o' startin'; so that altogether, as you may think, the cap'n warn't altogether in the sweetest temper in the world, nor the mate neither. As for the quief engineer, he was an easy-goin' sort o' chap as nothin' on earth could put out. But on the mornin' of the third day out from Liverpool he cum down to me in a precious hurry tookin' as if some.

''Tom,' says he, 'what d'ye think?
Blest if we aint found a stowaway.' (That's the name, you know, sir, as we gives to chaps

as hides theirselves aboard outward-bound vessels, and gets carried out unbeknown to everybody.)

"I didn't wait to hear no more, but up on deck like a sky-rocket; and there I did see a sight, and no mistake. Every man Jack o' the crew and what few passengers we had aboard was all in a ring on the fo'castle, and in the middle stood the first mate looking as black as thunder. Right in front of him, lookin' a regular inite among all them big fellers, was a little bit o' a lad not ten year old—isgged as a scarecrow, but with bright, curly hair and a bonnie little face o' his own, if it hadn't been so woful thin and pale. But, bless yer soul! to see the way that little chap held his head up and looked about him, you'd ha' thought the whole ship belonged to him. The mate was a great, hulkin', blackbearded feller, with a look that 'ud ha' frightened a horse, and a solea fit to make one samp through a keyhola; but the young un warn't a bit afeard—he stood straight up, and looked him full in the face with them bright, clear, eyes o' him, for all the world as if he was Prince Halfred himself. Folk did say afterwards (lowering his voice to a whisper) as how he comed o' better blood nor what he cought, and, for my part, I'm rayther o' that way o' thinkin' myself, for I never yet seed a common street Harab (as they calls 'em now) carry it off like him. You might has heard a pin drop as the mate spoke.

that kind o' chaff; 'and then he says to him: 'Look here, my lad, that's all very fine, but it won't do here—some of these men o' mine are in the secret, and I mean to have it out of 'em. Now, you just point out the man as stowed you away and fed you, this very min-for it?

"Eight minutes! says the mate, his great, deep voice breakin' in upon the silence like the toll of a funeral bell. 'If you've got anything to confess, my lad, you'd best out with it, for yer time's nearly up.

"I've told you the truth, answers the boy, very pals, but as firm as ever, 'May I say my prayers, please ?"

"The mate nodded and down goes the poor little chap on his knees (with that infernal rope about his neck all the time), and puts up his poor little hands to pray. I couldn't make out what he said (fact, my head was in
